

2017 ANNUAL REPORT

FROM THE EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

Dear Friends and Allies,

In spite of the many obstacles facing our environment and our communities in 2017 -- from the rolling back of important environmental protections to natural disasters and political gridlock -- the environment and conservation movement came together like never before. I saw everyone from international groups to local all-volunteer groups participating in activities and actions across the country to protect clean water and the living things that rely on it.

Alabama's river movement was no exception.

The Alabama Rivers Alliance grew our outreach & partnership activities exponentially throughout the year. Each action taken was a strategic move toward protecting clean water and our 132,000 miles of rivers & streams.

Through our partnership with the Southern Environmental Law Center, we were able to commission public opinion polling which revealed that 4 in 5 Alabamians want an Alabama Water Plan.

As a supporter of ARA, you know that our years-long fight for this plan is important and we must continue to push for it in this election year until a plan is in place to protect stream flows & provide equitable solutions in times of water shortage.

By collaborating with Alabama's eight Waterkeeper organizations, the Alabama Department of Environmental Management and sewer utilities, we have made progress towards improving the way the public is notified of sewage spills in their community and this vital information has been made more accessible to people across the state.

By partnering with Sierra Club Alabama Chapter, Conservation Alabama, and the national Sierra Club, we educated citizens on the legislative process and provided extensive training on how to talk to elected officials about their concerns for clean water and a protected environment.

By collaborating with American Rivers, River Network, the Cahaba River Society and other local partners, we are continuing the critical work to find solutions for protecting natural stream flows and vital fish habitat through existing regulations.

The list of successes in 2017 through our strategic partnerships and collaborations goes on and on and you will see many of them highlighted throughout this report. As an Alliance, having a strong network of watershed and community based partners is the key to success in advocating for Alabama's rivers. We value these organizations and individuals who make our organization possible and who are willing to collaborate beyond their local watershed or community to solve statewide threats to clean water and public health.

As we look back at a successful 2017 and our 20-year history, we are even more excited about the next 20 years. Thanks to your support this year, we were able to add 440 new members, grow our email list by 136%, and increase our reach on Facebook (15%), Twitter (24%) and Instagram (34%). It is only with this strong foundation that we are able to create a hopeful vision for the future and take on new initiatives like the inspiring and engaging Southern Exposure Film Fellowship program.

I hope you will continue on this important journey with us as we work toward a future of clean water and healthy rivers for all in Alabama. Please visit our website and social media platforms often to stay up to date on how you can help throughout 2018.

"Having [Trey] Glenn now in charge of the entire region, it should be alarming to everyone who cares about clean water. He's made his allegiance to business and industry interest over the environment and public health."

As part of Alabama Water Rally planning for our 20th anniversary celebration, we reached out to professionals who are early in their careers and interested in water protection. We charged them with developing a plenary at Water Rally diving in to the future of environmental protection in Alabama. The energy was palpable as they shared their vision for the future of our state and their role in defending rivers for the years to come.

Our Junior Board was born from these early conversations and we are thrilled to have them help shape the future of the Alabama Rivers Alliance.

ALABAMA WATER PLAN UPDATE

The Alabama Rivers Alliance continued our full court press to lead the grassroots advocacy for an Alabama Water Plan in 2017. While politics and state leaders were not as cooperative as we hoped, important policy initiatives continued throughout the year and we are still progressing in the right directions.

Some of our successes this past year include:

- Engaged hundreds of citizens to write letters to Governor Ivey asking that the Alabama Water Agencies Working Group report be released to the public (report contains recommendations for the development of a plan).
- Kept this issue alive through the change in leadership in the Governor’s office via social media, letter writing campaigns, media articles and op-eds and more.
- Worked with American Rivers to get the entire Mobile Basin designated as one of America’s Top Ten Most Endangered Rivers due to lack of a statewide water plan.
- Introduced a strong bill from Representative Patricia Todd to address gaps in water laws that are hindering the ability to develop a plan protecting stream flows and accounting for water use.
- Worked alongside SELC to commission polling and messaging around this issue that will be used in the coming election year and legislative session (see graphic).
- Garnered significant media attention throughout the year, even during the Senate special election in December.
- Agencies released the Surface Water Assessments and Groundwater Assessments that were completed with funding from the general fund over the past few years. The lack of data regarding water consumption and availability has been a hindrance in developing a plan.

“The Alabama Rivers Alliance, an environmental watchdog, is concerned that the state remains without a plan in an era when droughts have parched the South.” -- Decatur Daily editorial November 27, 2017

“We don’t wait to plan for a hurricane or a tornado until it happens, so why wait to plan for water shortage until there is a crisis? With this move, the Governor is ignoring years of work and millions of taxpayer dollars spent by all of the agencies governing Alabama’s water resources. Rather than kicking the can down the road yet again, we need leadership that prioritizes water stewardship and protection.”
-- Cindy Lowry, Decatur Daily, November 23, 2017

State Senator Gerald Dial, R-Lineville, is calling on Alabama to develop a Water Plan: “The fact that we haven’t been able to put a plan in place is an immense disservice to the people of Alabama.”
-- Alabama Political Reporter, January 15, 2018

SUPPORTING LOCAL PARTNERS

As the Alliance Coordinator, I traveled the state talking to partners from all of Alabama's watersheds and meeting with concerned citizens from all four corners of our state. This past year was an exciting one for our efforts to support and strengthen local groups in order to have a strong Alliance protecting clean water and healthy rivers across Alabama. By my last count, I met with 33 groups across Alabama and participated in 36 different partner organizations' events to listen, learn, support and spread the word about the importance of working together for clean water.

In January, we hosted a screening of the Wild & Scenic Film Festival at Straight to Ale Brewing. The event brought in more than 200 attendees and proceeds were shared with three organizations in the Tennessee Watershed.

In March, we hosted our annual Alabama Water Rally at Camp McDowell on Clear Creek in the Black Warrior Watershed, where we celebrated our 20th anniversary as an organization. The event had record attendance, boasting a 70% increase from the previous year. Harnessing the palpable energy from Water Rally, we turned our focus to Montgomery and the Alabama River for Rivers of Alabama Day in April. With more than 40 participants in Montgomery talking directly to their elected officials, the event highlighted the importance of talking to legislators about protecting rivers.

Heading into May, our collaboration moved back to Birmingham, where we worked with both national and local partners to host the first Renew Alabama climate change conference. During the summer, I led a Leadership Development Training for Friends of Turkey Creek Nature Preserve. Ensuring local partners are strong internally is a key service that we offer our Alliance member groups. As fall approached, our work once again turned to the all-important task of empowering groups and citizens to talk to their elected official about environmental issues. Partnering with Sierra Club and Conservation Alabama, our Volunteer Lobbyist Training workshop helped attendees gain the tools and confidence to approach local and state elected officials about issues of concern. As I look back on the year, I am proud to be a part of this vibrant Alliance, I am grateful for the connections made and look forward to more successes together in 2018!

COMING SOON...

We are thrilled to announce we will be assuming the role as primary sponsor of the prestigious Southern Exposure Film Fellowship program beginning in January 2018. SELC was the sponsor from 2012 – 2016.

SOUTHERN EXPOSURE is a film fellowship program that is actively raising awareness about Alabama's incredible natural resources and important environmental issues that impact all of us. This innovative summer fellowship brings emerging filmmakers from across the country to tell authentic, engaging stories through short documentary films about Alabama's environment — and the people who cherish it — from the mountains to the coast.

"ARA is proud to be the new home for the Southern Exposure Film Fellowship program, which continues to be extremely important to the environmental community throughout Alabama and beyond," Cindy Lowry said. "We are excited to lead this tremendously successful program, bringing in emerging filmmakers to Alabama to meet with local community members, elected officials, scientists, business owners, riverkeepers and other conservation groups to create short documentaries that highlight Alabama's environmental heritage, as well as the threats facing our state."
